Understanding the requirements and expectations surrounding these assessments can significantly impact a student's academic journey. This article will explore WGU's objective assessments, the passing scores required, preparation strategies, and the overall significance of these assessments in your degree completion process.

What is WGU's Objective Assessment?

WGU's objective assessments are designed to measure a student's knowledge and skills in a specific subject area. These assessments are a vital component of the university's competency-based education model, which allows students to progress through their degree programs at their own pace.

Types of Objective Assessments

Objective assessments at WGU generally fall into two categories:

- Knowledge Checks: These are formative assessments that help students gauge their understanding of the course material. They are not graded but provide feedback on areas that may need further study.
- Objective Exams: These are the graded assessments that determine whether a student has achieved the necessary competency in a subject area. Passing these exams is essential for advancing through a program.

Understanding the Passing Score

The passing score for WGU's objective assessments varies by degree program and course. However, it is generally established at a minimum of 70%. This means that students must correctly answer at least 70% of the questions on the exam to pass.

Importance of the Passing Score

Achieving the passing score is critical for several reasons:

- Progression in Degree Program: Students must pass objective assessments to earn credits toward their degree. Failing to achieve the passing score can delay graduation.
- Competency Demonstration: WGU's model focuses on demonstrating competency in various subjects. The passing score is a benchmark for ensuring that students have the necessary knowledge and skills.
- Financial Considerations: Since WGU operates on a flat-rate tuition model, failing an assessment may lead to additional costs if students need to retake courses or assessments.
